About Guangzhou

A bastion of China's Lingnan (southern) culture, Guangzhou has a 2,200-year-old history. Known as the 'Flower City' and 'City of Rams', it's also one of the country's most dynamic cities and has been listed as China's second city with the greatest change by Forbes magazine for two consecutive years. You can explore both the ancient and recent history of Guangzhou at Nanyue King's Museum, Guangxiao Temple, Baiyun Mountain, Zhenhai Tower and Dr Sun Yat-sen Memorial Hall. Alternatively, you can witness China's spectacular transformation into modernity at the Canton Tower, Asian Games town, Pazhou International Convention and Exhibition Center, Guangdong Science Center, and Chimelong Tourism Resorts.

The city also offers visitors vibrant nightlife, beautiful views of the Pearl River, traditional diversions such as Cantonese opera and the circus, and, on the city's bar streets and within its cosy hotels, a more chilled-out pace. And of course, there is the food. Guangzhou is the stronghold one of the world's most popular styles of Chinese cooking — Cantonese cuisine. For travellers, Guangzhou is also a major transportation hub, offering air, land and water-based connections to many domestic and international destinations. Guangzhou Baiyun International Airport is the third largest airport in China. It is an international airport. In total there are 193 airports around the world that have direct flights to Guangzhou, spread around 173 cities in 40 countries. Currently, there are 133 domestic flights to Guangzhou. Hong Kong (HKG) has direct flights to 123 destinations in 41 countries. From Hong Kong, it takes 60 minutes via high-speed rail from West Kowloon Station to reach Guangzhou.
